

2020
in a nutshell

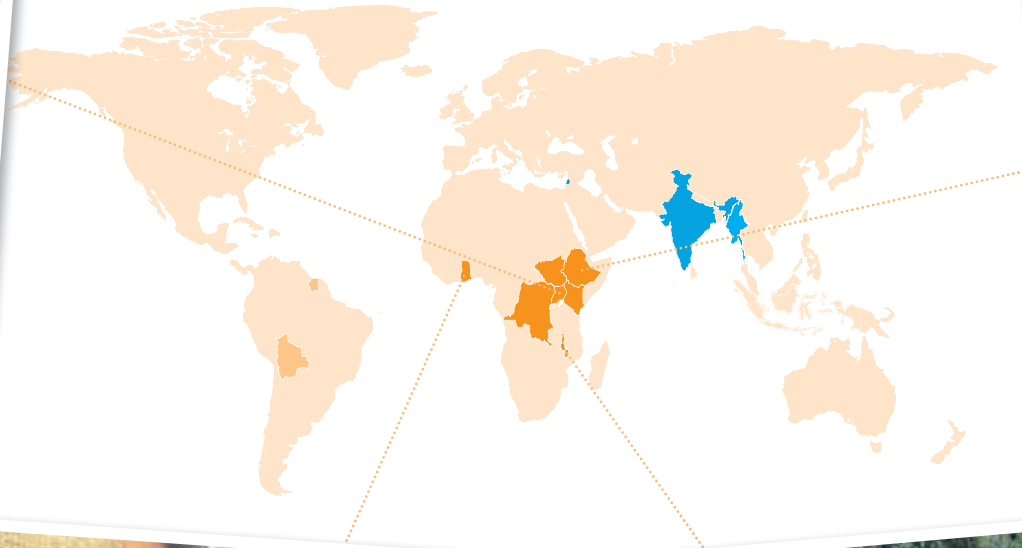

Education during lockdown

It became an educational crisis the world had never seen before. The corona pandemic put the whole world flat on its back, and education as well. For children in developing countries in particular, a school that is closed has disastrous consequences. This is why we worked on better education in 2020, but even during lockdown we made sure to keep the focus of both the students and parents on their classes.

Lockdown or not, the harvest does not stop. This is why our project in Uganda, where young people are educated to become enterprising farmers, continued as well. Obviously all the necessary protective measures are followed there.

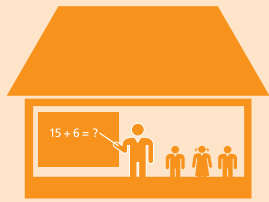

In keeping with the motto 'Everybody back to school' we help the schools to start up again. Yishak (Ethiopia): "We keep our distance from the teacher, don't borrow pens from each other and wash our hands all the time. But that is no problem, I am just so happy that I can go back to school!"

Adam (Ghana) is happy that his children can learn from home thanks to school radio, instead of getting into all kinds of unsafe situations out on the streets. "You learn a lot from the broadcasts. Now I know how to encourage my children to learn, I can follow their daily schedule and I am in contact with their teachers about homework."

In 20 EcoSTARSchools in Malawi, 20,000 students not only enjoy a higher level of quality of their classes, they also learn how you can fight against climate change by taking good care of the Earth. Rehema (group 8): "It's great to have classes outside and I learn how to look after myself and the environment."

We provide good basic education

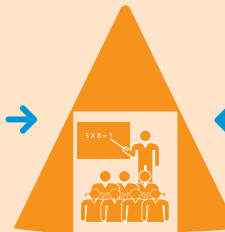

2,325 teachers received additional training
129,041 children received better schooling

We give young people a chance to land a job

335 teachers were trained
6,912 young people followed vocational education

We provide an education for refugee children

907 teachers received additional training
39,221 refugee children went back to school

We keep children and their parents focused on classes when schools are closed

Millions of children, young people and their parents listened to our school radio broadcasts

Take action for a good education.

44,143

private donors, schools, businesses, funds and other organisations support our work.

Total income from fundraising:

€ 7,168,989

our spending

Total spending:

€ 7,899,337

- 61.1% development cooperation
- 16.1% recruitment costs
- 8.7% information
- 5.4% education exchange
- 5.1% capacity building
- 3.6% management and administration

Despite receiving less money in 2020, because of the corona crisis, Edukans chose to spend as much as possible on development cooperation. We financed our regular work and additional projects like the school radio broadcasts during the lockdown. This way, we ensured that students continued to focus on their classes.

